

Note to viewer:

The following junior high art class sketchbook was sitting in my archives for over forty years before I decided to scan it in. The resulting image quality is the best available for drawings made with an HB pencil on easily wrinkled newsprint. The subject matter is things popular back in the day to a fourteen year-old: movies, spaceships, aircraft, and automobiles...taken from books and magazines. Some drawings are purely from my imagination. Others are actual still lifes.

My instructor was Memorial Junior High's Asta Antoft, who became a friend of mine into adulthood, and her comments and grades can be seen on some of the pages here. Junior high was my last encounter with art in public school, as my high school (Sydney Academy) offered no art programs.

The assignment here for us grade 9 students was to render one hundred drawings throughout the school year's first term in 1982, which is why most of the drawings are numbered. While many of these drawings have faded over time, I hope you enjoy them as a "blast from the past" from a teenage artist in the early 1980s.
